

Artist Requirements for Modern Fuel's Virtual Gallery

Thank you for your interest in being part of Modern Fuel's virtual gallery! Before you submit your application to our email at: mfarcvirtualgallery@gmail.com, please read over our artist requirements.

Disclaimer: Modern Fuel does not represent the artists displayed through our virtual gallery and will be using this platform solely as a way to highlight talent within our region. Any questions regarding sales or commission should be discussed separately.

Participating artists must be working from within Kingston and surrounding area or have a previous connection to Modern Fuel Artist-Run Centre, Queen's University or the Kingston art community. Emerging and mid-career contemporary artists will be prioritized during selection. We will not accept any work that promotes racism, ableism, homophobia, transphobia, ageism or sexism.

When submitting work please include the title, medium, date, an artist statement and 1-2 high quality images of your piece. All artist statements and bios should be in third person and no more than 150-200 words combined (please view the sample below):

Quinn Venable is a first year Master's Student at York University. She is interested in learning how various curatorial techniques can impact the way an audience engages with an exhibition. What is considered a meaningful experience when digesting contemporary art and how do we ensure this feeling is transferred from artist to observer? Venable just recently graduated from Queen's University where she studied art history and religious studies. This summer she is working for Modern Fuel Artist-Run Centre as their program coordinator and is excited to learn more about the space's operations.

Artists may also include a link to their social media accounts and or/website, as well as contact information.

Artists do not need to be members to be featured on our virtual gallery and are encouraged to submit in any style or medium. Artists will only be featured once in order to include as many voices and perspectives as possible. If you have any questions regarding your submission or the virtual gallery please feel free to contact us at: mfarcvirtualgallery@gmail.com.
